REDUCED INEQUALITIES

In our days there are many inequalities around the world. For example economic , social , educational , racial and gender inequalities. Those inequalities differ in each country. In most developed societies inequalities are smaller than the less developed countries like Africa and Asia. The most important inequality is financial. To be more specific the economic ability of a family affects the education of the members and determine their social status. That means the members of a rich family have more chances for a better quality of life than a poor one. For example better schools better job and better medical treatment.

REDUCED INEQUALITIES

In Africa, Asia and South America there are millions of people that they don't have the economical ability for food, water, house and medicines. This is the most important reason that make people migrate because they want to have a better life.

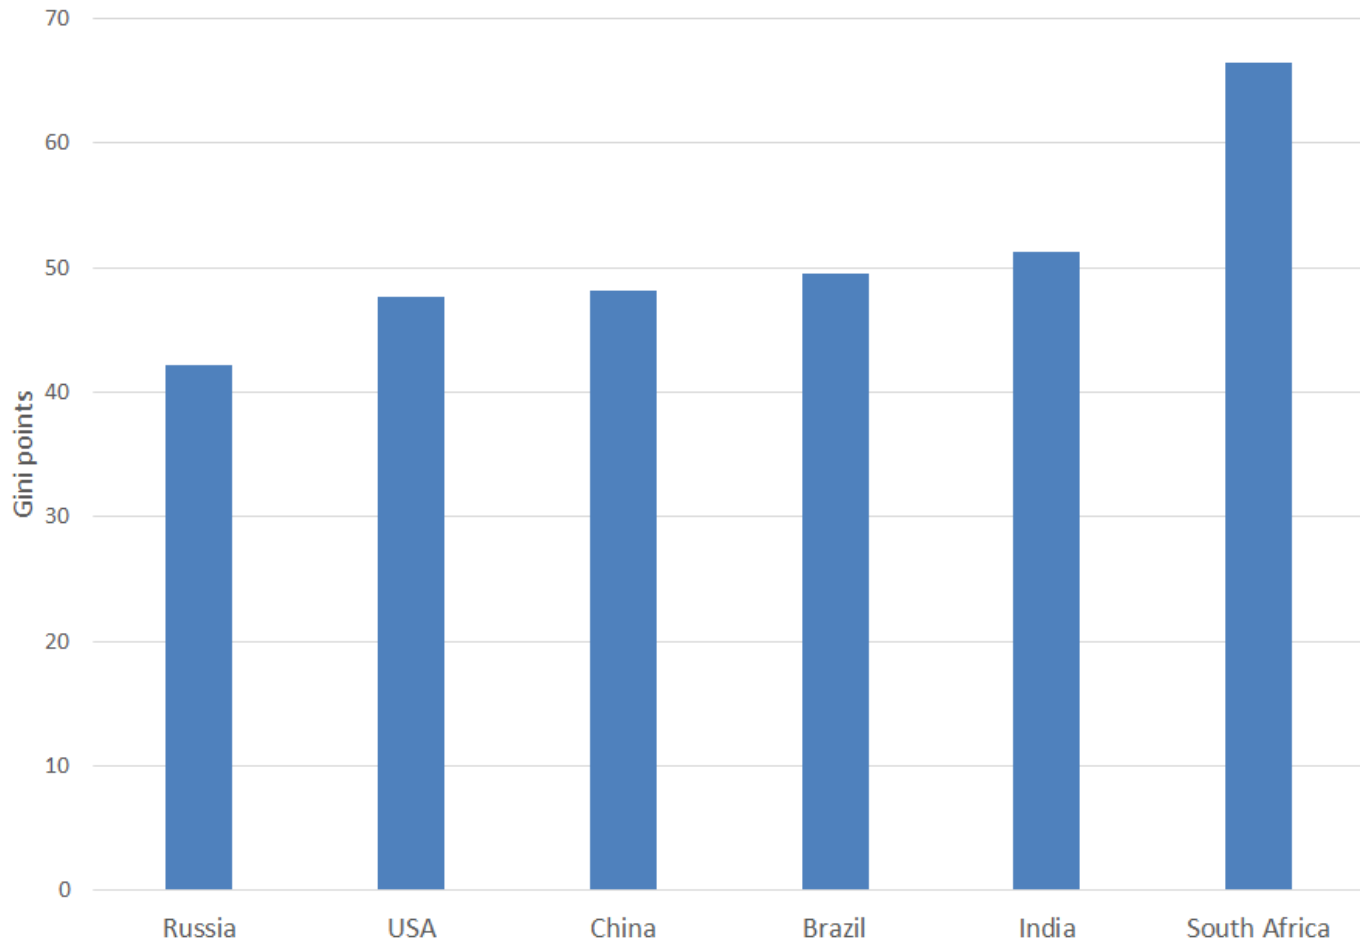

REDUCED INEQUALITIES

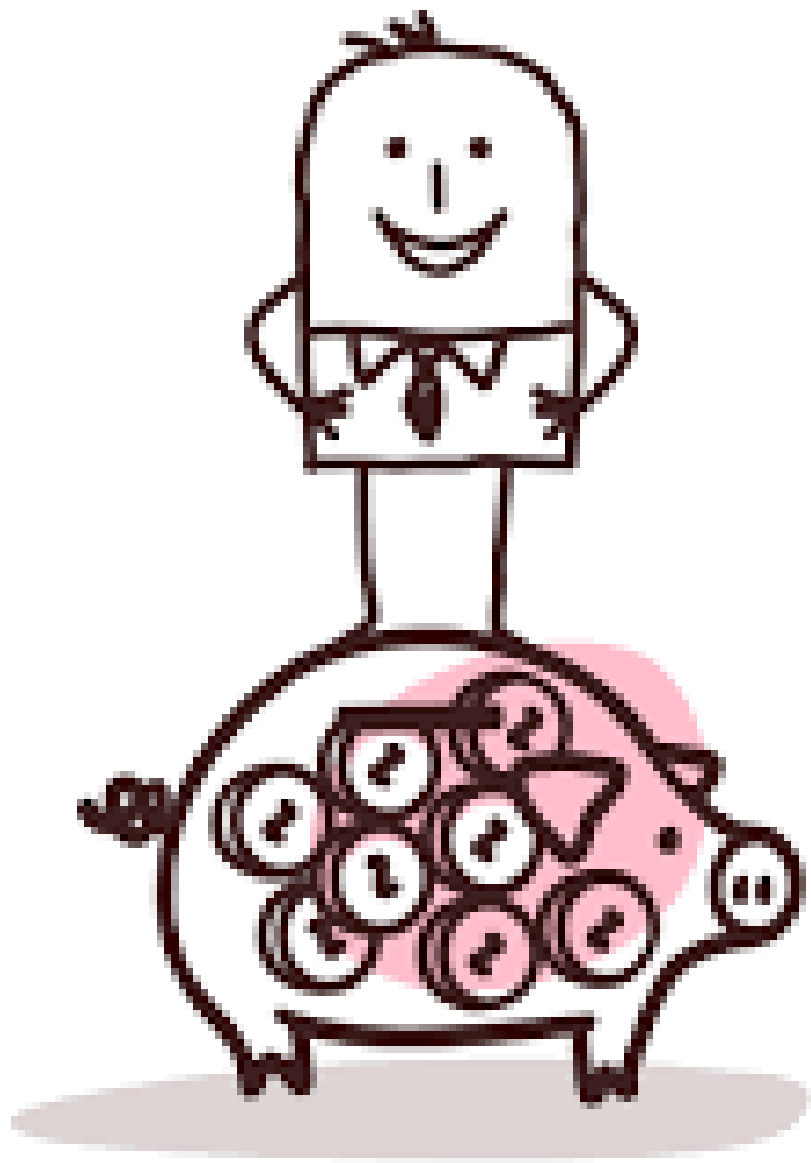

Now days:

- The richest people in the world own as much as the poorest half of humanity. And the gap between rich and poor is getting wider .7 out of 10 people live in countries where economic inequality is worse than it was 30 years ago
Straighten and strengthen the legal framework to prevent abuses.

Solutions:

- There are a lot of ways to make economic inequalities be less. The politicians must help the poor citizens
- the society can help them by giving them free medical treatment , free education and learning to the children from young age that we are same
- Take care of the young, as they are our most valuable resource. Countries far poorer than the U.S. have decided that all young people should have access to food, education and health care so they can fulfill their aspirations.
- The government should give chances for work to the unemployed citizens

Sub-Saharan Africa

#2 Workforce development

#3 Improved education

- Another also important inequality is gender. To more specific in some countries women are not allowed to vote or to be elected in parliament , have a good job , drive cars and have a good salary . At least develop countries people believe that the man must work and the woman have to clean the house , cook or raise the children . But at also develop countries there are a lot of stereotypes about women that block the equal opportunities

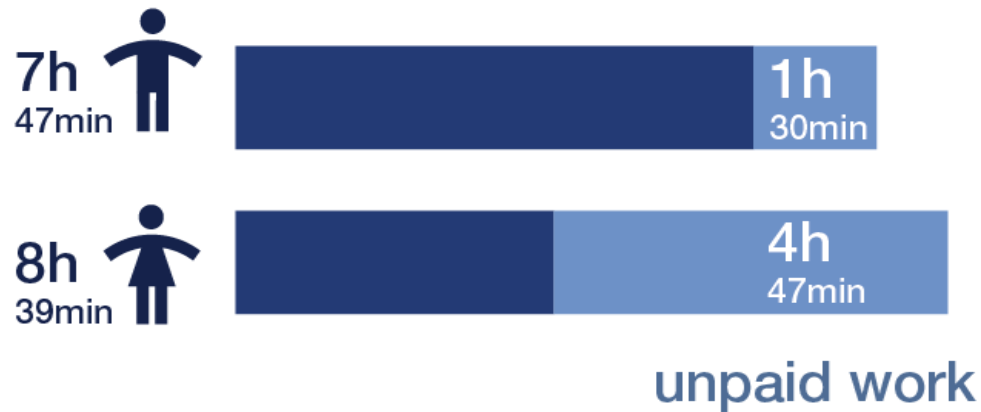

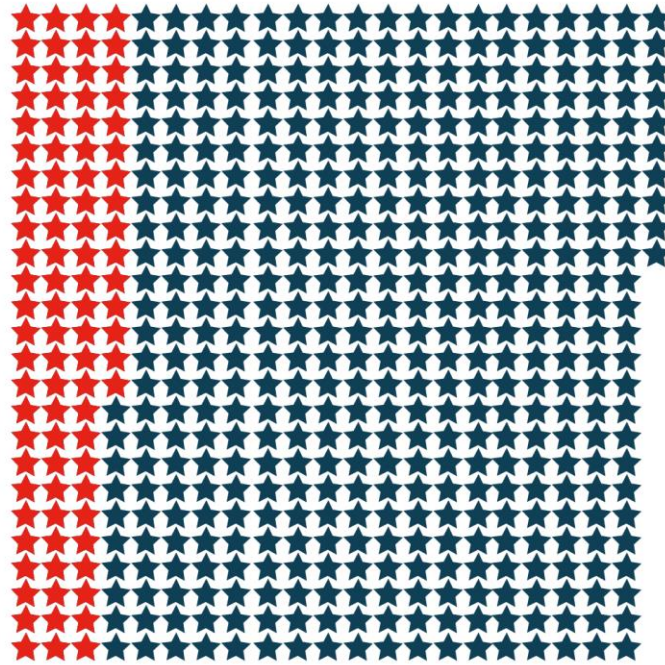

- Now days:

and are breadwinners in 40% of

- Solutions:
- The children have to learn from young age that women and men are the same and they have equal chances for work
- The government should implement policies that increase women and men's access to opportunities and resources
- The countries that are not develop should try to educate the girls equal
- The government should give more important jobs to women
- The girls have to learn that they have to fight for their rights and that they have the same value as boys
